

CONTENT

Vorwort der Herausgeber	9
Foreword	11
Introduction	13
I. Short history and the stage of research	15
II. Archaeological research in the medieval graveyard	24
II.1. Research previous to 2005	24
II.2. The research strategy in 2005	26
II.3. General characteristics of the site	28
II.4. Topography of constructions	31
II.4.1. The enclosure wall	31
II.4.2. Saint Jacob's cemetery chapel	33
II.4.3. The Rotunda	34
II.4.4. A foundation	37
II.4.5. The parish church	38
II.4.6. Saint Ladislaus' Chapel	41
III. The Cemetery	45
III.1. General characteristics	45
III.2. The state of the cemetery at the moment of the excavation. The limitations of the field research	47
III.3. Depth of the graves	50
III.4. The backfills of the graves	52
III.5. Elements of funerary rite	55
III.5.1. The shape of the grave	55
III.5.2. The wooden elements	55
III.5.3. Orientation of the skeletons	58
III.5.4. The position of the skeletons	59
III.5.5. Special elements of the funerary rite	60
III.6. Funerary inventory	62
III.6.1. The coins	65
III.6.2. The pottery	66
III.6.3. The shell valves	69
III.6.4. The garment accessories	69
III.6.5. Jewellery	71
III.6.6. Other items	72
III.6.7. General considerations	72
III.7. Chronological delimitations	73
III.8. Observations on the chronology of the anthropologically analyzed graves	79
III.9. The graves with head niche	81
III.10. Elements of funerary topography	87

III.11. Historical and archaeological conclusions	94
III.12. Several considerations concerning the local context	95
IV. Methods for the anthropological analysis	121
IV.1. Introduction	121
IV.2. Preservation	121
IV.3. Methodology	123
V. Paleodemography	125
V.1. Introduction and methods	125
V.2. The demography of the Huet Square cemetery	125
V.3. Medieval samples compared and conclusions	133
VI. Metric data	137
VI.1. Introduction	137
VI.2. Subadults	137
VI.3. Adults	138
VI.3a. Skull	138
VI.3b. Females	139
VI.3c Males	141
VI.4. Statures	144
VI.5. Asymmetry	145
VI.6. Differences between sexes and sexual dimorphism	146
VII. Pathology	147
VII.1. Dental status and disease	147
VII.1a. Dental calculus	147
VII.1b. Ante-mortem tooth loss	148
VII.1c. Abscesses	148
VII.1d. Caries	149
VII.1e. Subadult dental disease	149
VII.2. Dietary and developmental conditions	149
VII.2a. Hyperostosa porotica	149
VII.2b. Rickets	150
VII.3. Infections	150
VII.3a. Osteoperiostitis	150
VII.3b. Tuberculosis	155
VII.3c. Other infections	155
VII.4. Joint disease	155
VII.4a. Osteoarthritis	155
VII.5. Trauma	156
VII.5a. Fractures	158
VII.5b. Projectile/blunt force traumas	159

VII.5c. Sharp force traumas	159
VII.5d. Blunt force traumas	159
VII.5e. Myositis ossificans traumatica	160
VII.6. Miscellaneous pathology	160
VII.6a. Enthesopathies	160
VII.6b. Rhomboid fossa	161
VII.6c. Cortical defects	161
VII.6d. Tumors	161
VII.6e. Trephination	162
VIII. Summary and comments	163
VIII.1. The research of other Romanian medieval cemeteries	163
VIII.2. Hermannstadt – interpretive data synthesis	167
VIII.2a. Paleodemography	167
VIII.2b. Metric data	169
VIII.2c. Paleopathology	173
VIII.3. Anthropological correlation with the historical data about the Transylvanian population from the 12 th -16 th century	174
IX. Deutsche Zusammenfassung	181
X. References	202
XI. Lists	211
XI.1. List of Annexes on CD	211
XI.2. Names of places	213
XI.3. List of figures, tables, graphs for each chapter and plates	215
XII. Plates 1-64	231